We are destroying the life-support systems of Earth rapidly, making our future uncertain. Ecosystems—the complex sets of organisms that form the globe's living landscape—regulate the atmosphere, water, and soils. They supply humanity its food, most medicines, and many other essential products, and they fill our lives with beauty. But they are falling apart as, one by one, their constituent ...

Praise for Here Today, Gone Tomorrow:
“Get outside. Explore. Ask questions.
Take action. These are the lessons from Sneddon’s thoughtful essays about the natural world around us. Written with passion and an attention to detail, each essay reveals the beauty, complexity,
and fragility of our environment.
